

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN MANCHESTER.

On a gloomy morning, shortly after 10 o'clock, a fire of a destructive character occurred in Allen's Buildings, Victoria Street, Manchester, and but for the prompt action of Mr. Taylor, the proprietor, the fire might have been extinguished before it had done any damage. The fire was started by seeing an immense quantity of paper on the top of the roof of Allen's Buildings, in Victoria Street. He immediately despatched a messenger in a cab to give information at the chief fire station in the city, and messengers from the Victoria Street fire station and the Anson Court. He then proceeded to the scene of the fire, and without waiting for the arrival of the engines from the fire brigade stations, he went to Mr. Taylor's residence in Victoria Street, and with the aid of the fire engine established in Victoria Street, and two men were applied to the hydrants, and a supply of water was immediately thrown on the flames.
