Mme. Halide Edib, Institute Speaker, Scores "Occidental Superiority"

Says in New Book That Attitude Toward East May Be Cause of Future Wars—Blames Lloyd George For Greek Invasion of Turkey—Declares Mustafa Kemal is Paradox and Expresses Pity and Praise For Him.

If war ever breaks out between the East and the West, it will be owing not to political or economic causes but to the assumed superiority of the West over the East. This opinion is expressed by Madame Halide Edib, the noted Turkish feminist and Nationalist who was one of the lecturers at the Institute of Politics here last week.

Madame Edib, who is the author of the book "The Turkish Revolution," which is published by The Century Company today, said that she was "not at all surprised" by the "Occidental" attitude toward the East. She said that she was "not at all surprised" by the "Occidental" attitude toward the East. She said that she was "not at all surprised" by the "Occidental" attitude toward the East.

Madame Edib contrasts this attitude with Lloyd George's declaration of January, 1918: "We are fighting for the rich and advanced lands of the East."
